Bear Market Decision For The Balanced Investor

What this chart shows

If you invested $10,000 in a balanced portfolio at the start of 2007, by March 2009, the month global stocks hit bottom after the financial crisis, your investment was worth $7,530 – a drop of nearly 25%. If you threw in the towel at that point and invested your remaining money in a 5-year GIC (not knowing of course that it was the bottom), 11 years later you'd still be looking at a loss. If you'd simply stayed invested, you would have more than doubled your money. If you had added $10,000, you would have earned roughly 2.5 times your total invested capital. [Chart notes are on the following page.]

The bottom line

It's impossible to know when the market is at a top or a bottom. But we do know that selling your investments after a steep loss can have a significant negative impact on your financial future. In other words: don't lose twice.

You can listen to the full recording here

Key points from the webinar:

- With recent market rallies, there appears to be a disconnect between market performance and the economy. According to Yufei Man, Director, Asset Allocation and Investment Strategy at NEI Investments, there are three main reasons why:
  - Economic data is backward looking while markets are forward looking, so at any point in time there is likely to be a disconnect. In the absence of clarity in the near term, markets are looking past the uncertainty and pricing in what the eventual recovery will look like.
  - With low interest rates, we are seeing “major tailwinds” for equities, including central bank actions helping to offset weaker corporate earnings.
  - The median return of the 5 biggest companies in the S&P 500 is 12% YTD, while the remaining 495 companies have a median loss of almost 16%. The performance of a few large companies is masking the broad weakness that remains for the rest of the S&P 500.
- China-U.S. relations and existing tensions will likely come back into focus with increased rhetoric from both sides as we approach the U.S. election in November.
- Globally, we are likely to experience more external shocks, not less – requiring transition to a more sustainable business model that is less vulnerable to supply chain weakness.
- John Bai, VP & Chief Investment Officer at NEI Investments, characterizes the ideal future as “smart”, “clean”, “resilient”, and “fair”.
- The engagement work of NEI Investments is focused on helping companies build a culture that considers all stakeholders
